KING'S AUTHORITY OVER PREMIER NIL.

Sidney Lee Shows That Edward VII Had Nothing to Do With Anglo-German Alliance.

TRADITION ALL AGAINST HIM.

British Sovereign May Ask Questions of His Ministers, but Nothing More, and Answers Need Not Be Given at All.

London, Jan. 3 .- The Spectator to-day London, Jan. 3.—The Spectator to-day gives much prominence to a lengthy letter from Sidney Lee, the well-known lecturer and writer and Trask lecturer at Princeton University, denying that the Anglo-German co-operation in Venezuela is in any way due to the action of King Edward.

Mr. Lee throws interesting and authoritative light on the relations between the King and his Ministers.

"There is no ground for the suspicion," writes Mr. Lee, "that any revolutionary change in the relations of the sovereign with the Ministers has taken place during with the Ministers has taken place during change in the relations of the sovereign with the Ministers has taken place during the last two years.

"The coil of tradition which now encircles the Premier's office is far too heavy to permit him to suddenly surrender any essential part of his power or influence to the sovereign. The sovereign can no more initiate a policy for the Ministers or impore upon them by the urgency of his appeal a policy of his own devising than he can by sole authority promulgate a new law.

"The sovereign solely enjoys the right of criticising the Minister's proposals. If a Minister deems these to be of any value he has it in his power to adopt.

"But, in accordance with the admitted custom, he invariably treats them as unauthoritative suggestions, and is entitled to ignore them altogether without in any way prejudicing his relations with the sovereign, who is debarred from offering formal advice on any political question."

Mr. Lee adds that when the sovereign even expresses informally his views they must take a tentative, interrogative form, "which barely raises them above the level of any irresponsible suggestion."

"No trace of subservience has been suffered to survive the Minister's manner of correspondence with the crown. Custom prohibits a Minister from allowing his final decision to be controlled, effectively, by royal wishes or hopes.

"The Minister has only to meet a royal suggestion which fails to commend itself to him with a direct negative, in order, except in the rarest cases, to extinguish it summarily."

THINKS WEATHER HAS LITTLE TO DO WITH GRIP.

SPECIAL BY CABLE TO THE NEW YORK HERALD AND THE ST. LOUIS REPUBLIC. HERALD AND THE ST. LOUIS REPUBLIC.
London, Jan. 3.—(Copyright, 1963.)—The epidemic of influenza is vanishing. Inquiries among leading West End physicians show that very few fresh cases have occurred during the week. The Registrar General's return this week, indicates a decided failing off in London during the last week, Deaths attributed directly to influenza numbered twenty-eight, as against thirty-seven in the preceding week.

"I do not think the weather has so much to do with the increase of influenza as some people think," said a distinguished London physician. "One of the greatest epidemics of influenza we ever had occurred in Lasy a few years ago. We get influenza is wet, muggy weather; we get it in keen geosts; on a few years ago. We get influenza in wet, muggy weather; we get it in keen frosts; on board ship or on high mountains.

"As a matter of fact, we so not know much about influenza. No doubt it is due to a microba. When a microba finds favorable soil, it manifests atself, but medical science has yet much to learn as to why some persons fall victims to it and others escape.

some persons fall victims to it and others escape.

"No doubt one should avoid fatigue and keep well noweished when there is influenza about, for fatigue and undernourishment aid at. On the other hand, we have the striking fact that many of the best nourished and most easy-going persons in London have been stricken down. A comforting fact, however, is the marked detrease in new cases."

WOMAN'S COURAGE UNDAUNTED BY FIRE.

Marvelous Pluck of Mrs. Adele Repath of San Francisco Enabled Her to Escape From Burning Building-She Clung to Window Sill Until Rescued by a Fireman.

of furniture and wearing apparel—that is the inventory of happenings at the board-ing-house fire in this city.

All these incidents and all the loss were crowded into a few minutes, and in that short time the Fire Department did spiendid work in the face of a very hot blaze and under considerable difficulty, owing to the fact that it was hard to get at the flames.

Most of the boarders managed to get out of the house with whole skins, and little alse, very soon after the fire was discovered, but one young lady, Mrs. Adels Repath of Scattle, who occupied the upper front room, did not awake until all possibility of getting out by way of the stairs was cut off.

Without hesitation she threw up the window and stood waiting for help to arrive. The flames apparently started on the west side of the house, probably on the second story, swept the hallway and stairs and crept rapidly eastward.

In a very few minutes the room occupied by Mrs. Repath was caught in the flames, and as they came toward her the young woman retreated. She tossed a few clothes out of the window, and then made a little seat of the window, and then made a little package of her jewelry, which she also flung out.

As the heat became more intense Mrs. Repath clambered on to the window sill and finally let herself out, and, like an athlete on a horizontal bar, lowered herself to arms length, holding on to the window sill. There she hung, swaying slightly, the light of the flames from above and below showing her figure in white night robe in the corner next the adjoining building.

WOMAN'S PERHIOUS POSITION.

A young man ran into the next house to get a blanket so that she might jump into it, for she had presence of mind to tell those below that she would have to jump soon, but would try to hold on until the fire ladders arrived.

Suddenly there was a crash of glass just below and to the right of her and the flames burst through from the floor below. For a second or two agony was pictured in every feature of the young woman, who still held on grimly as the clanging belis told of the arrival, first of Fire Chief Sullivan, then of the hook and ladder company and the steam fire engine.

Chief Sullivan appreciated the peril of the young woman's position the moment he had alighted from his buggy, and, forming a trumpet of his hands, he yelled:

"Hold on for your life! Don't jump!" Then to the ladder company he shouted: "Ladder No 1, quick!"

Both orders were obeyed. The firemen threw the ladder against the burning house. The end reached above her head and she had to jump up to catch. But jump she did, catching a rung on the under side of the ladder.

There she hung for an instant, swaying in midsir; then she began the descent, hand the ladder.

There she hung for an instant, swaying in midair; then she began the descent, hand over hand, down the ladder.

A fireman ran up the ladder, met her half way, grasped her in his strong arm and bore her in safety to the ground.

A great cheer went up from the spectators

ONLY SLIGHTLY INJURED.

Doctor Leffier was quickly summoned and found that the young woman had escaped from her dangerous plight with comparatively slight injuries. Both wrists were barned, but not deeply, and her right knee had been cut and bruised, probably when she leaped to the ladder.

The burns were remarkably slight, considering the intense heat and the sparks that fell in showers on her hair and night-gown. These she shook and brushed off as she hung from the window sill as though they were nothing more serious than smowfiakes.

Chief Sullivan himself said he never saw such remarkable self-possession as that exhibited by Mrs. Repath.

While the crowd was watching the sensational escape of Mrs. Repath in the front of the building another lady had already made a leap from the back of the house and suffered a broken arm as the price of her courage.

Mrs. Ray Stump and her husband. George

LOSSES REPORTED.

Miss King, the landlady, lost everything save bedding and a little furniture that were removed from the house and she holds a policy of insurance on the furniture for a small amount. A sister of hers, living two blocks away, came to Miss King's rescue and found new quarters for the much worried and sorely tried woman.

Mrs. Stump lost her clothing and jewelry and her husband saved nothing but the night robe on his back.

Policeman J. B. Hurd, who was on duty on Geary street, was present at the fire and found two of Mrs. Repath's rings and these he turned over to the property clerk so that the owner was soon in possession of them again.

the owner was soon in possession of them again.

Two other rings, Mrs. Repath believes, were lost in the flames. The lady's home is in Seattle and she was visiting this city with her mother.

The latter was in Petaluma and knew nothing of the danger through which her daughter had passed so bravely until she returned from Sonoma County.

A pair of trousers with money in one of the pockets was also picked up by Policeman Hurd and turned over to the property clerk.

W. Lee and R. Gilbert, who roomed in the house, escaped with slight burns of the hands and feet. They, too, lost all their clothing in the fire.

The cause of the fire is unknown.

o'clock in the morning, a very frightened lot of roomers, a sensational leap from an upper story, a woman coolly hanging to a sill waiting to be saved and a total loss of furniture and wearing apparel—that is suffered a broken arm as the price of her cournge.

Mrs. Ray Stump and her husband. George Stump, a barber, occupied a rear saite about thirty feet from the ground. Stump jumped first and then his plucky wife followed him. The husband and brave woman found their way through the adjoining building, which is in course of construction, to the street front and no time was lost in getting her to a physician, who set her arm. The firemen got to work with a will on the burning fire. They clambered on the roof of the building on the cast and on to the brick side wall of the incomplete structure on the west.

To the streams of water poured from these places of vantage other streams from front and rear were added and in a short while it lasted, and yet the adjoining buildings were little more than scorched.
